The South African Picture Stone. An account of a strange lapidarian freak edmes all the way from Kimberly, South Africa. Workmen in the diamond mines at that place discovered a stone, dark brown in color, and about the size of a pigeon's egg, which viewed in a dark place with a candle or other light behind it, exhibits a candle or other light behind it, exhibits a perfect profile picture of a man from the waist up. Turning the pebble partially around, the image of a man vanishes, and the features of a woman's face, clear cut and partially concealed by heavy tresses, comes into view. ANOTHER BANK SWINDLED

This Time the Manufacturers' National Bank Suffers.

A BOOKKEEPER IS ACCUSED

Austin Leitch Allows a Bank Depositor to Overdraw His Account $7,800-The Discharge of the Official Brings the Matter to Light.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 2.-A napple was caused in financial circles over the news of another bank defalcation, with many of the curious features which have distinguished those in the Chemical and in the Shoe and Leather bank. came to light yesterday.

In this last instance, the distinguishing feature is the smallness of the amount which the bank will lose, but, as in the other two cases, according to the stories told about them, the guilty bank official realized nothing from his wrong doing, and the money which was taken from the institution has gone into the pockets of a depositor.

The Manufacturers' National bank, located at 72 Broadway, Williamsburg, is out an amount said not to exceed $7,800 through the dishonesty of one of its trusted bookkeepers. This man was E. Austin Leitch, who had been connected with the institution for about four years. Curiously enough, Leitch was discharged from the Manufacturers' National bank about three months ago, while the defalcation only came to light during the last week. It was exposed

The officers of the bank hope to recover the full amount, and for that reason were averse yesterday to giving ceived it, as their efforts to get hold of who had previous to this time befriended him, secured the position for him. He was promoted about two years ago to the position of bookkeeper in charge of some of the depositors' accounts.

He was found to be rather careless about his work and inattentive to the duties that devolved upon him, and finally it became necessary, three months ago, to discharge him because persisted in reaching the bank late

No Suspicion Entertained.

Not a suspicion was entertained at me that there wrong with his accounts or that he was in any manner dishonest. Another of the general clerks was promoted to take his vacated place, and, through motives of prudence, the bank officials made an examination of Leitch's books, so as to satisfy themselves that they correctly

It was not until a week or so ago, the work having progressed in a slow manner, that the discovery was made by the new bookkeeper that the bank's accounts would not balance within about

Then a careful inquiry was set on foot and it soon developed that there was a shortage of $7,800. President Loughran sent for Leitch, who lives at 155 Washington avenue, and when the discharged employe reached the bank he was informed of the discovery that had been made and asked what he knew about it. Leitch confessed that he had connived at the fraud. He admitted that this depositor had induced him to permit of the overdraft on plea that the money would be returned very soon and no one would be the wiser. This occurred about a year ago.

Was Put Off from Time to Time. Leitch had endeavored, he asserted, to compel this depositor to make good his account so that he could square the books and save the bank from loss and himself from exposure, but said the man put him off from time to time with promises, and compelled him to observe secrecy because of his own complicity in the defalcation. So the matter had gone on until this accidental discovery. President Loughran sent for this depositor, who did not respond to the call. His father, instead, went to the son's act. The father himself failed recently, and it will be very difficult for the bank to recover the money form either him or his son, though the officials hope it can be done.

It is a comparatively small amount, as the bank's officials view it, because the Manufacturers' National is one of the oldest and most stable institutions in Brooklyn. It has a capital of $250,000, and a surplus of $275,000, with a pre-mium of $50,000.
